

ABSTRACT

A multi-purpose hybrid terminal having secondary additional functions, such as Personal Digital Assistant, game and TV reception, in addition to a primary voice communication function. If the user presets one or more conditions such as time or place, to the implementation of an additional function while the terminal remains continuous within the phone mode, the terminal keeps monitoring whether the conditions have been met. When the condition is determined to have been met, the terminal automatically implements the additional function, even without the user's additional demand. Alternatively, the terminal informs the user of the completion of the preparation of the additional function by an appropriate method, thereby enabling the user to conveniently use the function, without much time delay, at a subsequent time of the user's choice.